In that spirit, this is a good time to review the definition of a booster. A booster is a person who seeks to gain an advantage for a college team by assisting the team in any way. A booster can provide the team with facilities, equipment, or financial resources. Boosters can influence the selection of players and the coaching staff. They can also influence the selection of recruits and the hiring of new coaches. Boosters can also influence the scheduling of games and the selection of opponents. Boosters can also influence the selection of donors and the fundraising efforts of the team.
